

Hello colleagues!

I hope you enjoyed the first half of “Interpreting for Cancer Genetics” last (DAY). Are you ready to get down into the nitty-gritty of actually interpreting this material? That’s what we’ll be doing this (DAY). So here’s what you need to do to get ready.

Follow-up from last class

1. I attach here the PowerPoint, since many of you requested it.
2. Questions from last class.

(ANSWER ANY OUTSTANDING QUESTIONS FROM DAY 1.)

Before (DAY, DATE)

I have attached a number of documents here that you will need to access during the class, whether you print them or have them available in a separate window. They are:

1. Bilingual glossary of pediatric genetics terms
Please download a bilingual glossary of cancer genetics terms for your language pair at Healthcare Interpreter Glossaries - National Coordinating Center for the Regional Genetics Networks \(ncrcg.org\)) for (PARTICIPANT LANGUAGES FOR WHICH WE HAVE GLOSSARIES). For those of you who speak these languages, please have the glossaries available for the class. I apologize that I do not have versions available for (ALL THE OTHER LANGUAGES SPOKEN BY THE PARTICIPANTS). For those of you who speak these languages, I encourage you to print out the English version and to work to fill in the non-English equivalents on your own.
2. Vocabulary exercises
Exercises 1 and 3 can be printed out. Exercise 2 is an online crossword puzzle, which you will need to access online. Please don’t do these before the class. Then you’ll just be bored during class!
3. Conversion exercises
Same as with the vocabulary exercises.

On (DAY, DATE)

1. On (DAY), (DATE) (TIME ZONE), log in at (LOG IN URL). We’ll be starting right at (TIME).
2. Please remember to sign on to this class using a desktop computer or a laptop computer. You will not be able to participate fully on a cell phone or tablet.
3. Please remember that you will be expected to leave your video on except for specific times when I’ll ask you to turn it off.

Whew, that’s a lot! If you have questions about content, feel free to email me. If you have questions about registration or anything technical, please contact (CONTACT NAME). Looking forward to seeing you on (DAY)!

Regards,
